FA28 Mossi

Dim Delobsom, A.A. Notes sur les Yarcé au Mossi. Revue Anthropologique, Vol. 44. Paris, 1934.

/This is an article by an educated upper-class Mossi dealing with the Moslem Yarsé ingredient of the Mossi population. Since much of the material is covered in other sources processed, this source has not been processed for the Mossi file. --Analyst/

Dubourg, Jacques. La Vie des Paysans Mossi: le Village de Taghalla. Cahiers d'Outremer, Vol. 10, No. 40, pp. 285-324. Bordeaux, 1957.

/This is a study of the village of Taghalla, which lies on the left Bank of the White Volta in the savannah country. The village has a strong social cohesion under the authority of the zaka naba, the latter being the suzerain of 13 villages in the area under the Mossi feudal system. Subsistence is based on millet and maize cultivation, with Peul taking care of the cattle. There is a problem of overpopulation in the area, with many of the younger people migrating to the coast. The situation might be ameliorated by introducing new food crops, as well as by expanding into land which has not previously been under cultivation. Since subsistence and migration have been treated in other sources already processed, this source has not been translated for the Mossi file. --Analyst/

FA28 Mossi

Marc, L. A. Le Pays Mossi. Paris: Émile Larose, Libraire-Editeur, 1909.

Pp. 200

/This volume is by a colonial infantry lieutenant who was with the group of soldiers who overcame the Mogho Naba in 1896. It is a general history and description of the Mossi. Since the most valuable sections of this source have been quoted extensively in other books in this file, e.g., those by Mangin and Tauxier, this report has not been processed for the Mossi file. --Analyst/

FA28 Mossi

Ouedraogo, J. and A. Prost. Alimentation en Pays Mossi. Comptes Rendus de la Ire Conference Internationale des Africanistes de l'Ouest. 1951.

/This is a report on Mossi nutrition made at the First International Conference of West Africanists. Since the material has already been covered in other sources in the file, this report was not processed for the Mossi file. -- Analyst/